FROTHY FUN FOR CHARITY

Firefighters at Wokingham Road fire station in Reading are lathering up their sponges in preparation for a charity car wash on Saturday (1 September).

The soapy superstars will be sponging and rinsing for all they are worth in aid of the Fire Service National Benevolent Fund ('Ben Fund') and the Lymphoma Society.

In addition to the car wash, the firefighters will be offering bookings for free home fire safety checks, including the fitting of smoke detectors free of charge, advice on checking child car seats are safely fitted and giving away 'power down' plugs and low-energy bulbs.

If you have a junior potential firefighter in the family, you can even buy them a replica fire helmet for £2! There will also be a chance to look around the fire station, chat to the firefighters and get close up to a fire appliance.

The car wash takes place between 10am and 4pm and the firefighters of Green Watch and all their helpers look forward to seeing you there.
